

The department in charge of handling employee-related issues inside a company, including hiring, paying employees, providing training, managing performance, and adhering to labor laws, is called human resources (HR). HR includes a number of tasks, including finding applicants, managing benefits, creating training programs for staff, cultivating good working relationships, and keeping correct personnel records. Strong interpersonal and communication skills are essential for HR professionals, as is the alignment of their job with more general business goals. All things considered, HR is essential to establishing a compliant and effective workplace while promoting business objectives and employee growth.

Health and safety protocols in food manufacturing are meticulously implemented to ensure consumer protection against contamination and safeguard employees from workplace risks. These protocols are divided into two primary categories: Food Safety, which focuses on product protection, and Occupational Safety, which prioritizes worker safety.

Food manufacturing workers in the Philippines are protected under the Labor Code, which grants them key rights such as minimum wage, overtime pay, job security, and occupational health standards.

Food Manufacturing

The process of transforming raw agricultural ingredients into consumable food items is known as food manufacturing. Food items must be cleaned, processed, packaged, and distributed, among other procedures. Strict adherence to food safety and quality standards is necessary in the complex and heavily regulated food manufacturing sector.

Understanding your rights is crucial because it empowers self-advocacy by allowing people to confront unfair policies, prevents exploitation by preventing abuse and unfair wages, and creates a just society through the exercise of fundamental rights like freedom of speech and legal due process.

WORKERS GUIDE TO WORKPLACE RIGHT AND SAFETY

Your guide to a safe, fair, and productive factory workplace

Safety Measures

Wearing PPE and following standard protocols.

Know your Rights

Understanding Wages, Hours, and Rest period regulations

1

Understanding The Role of HR

HR is here to support you. We handle more than just rules

Payroll

We ensure you are paid accurately and on time.

Benefits

We process your SSS, PhilHealth, Pag-IBIG, and other company benefits

Employee Support

We listen to your concerns and help create a better workplace

Policies & Compliance

We implement DOLE laws and company policies to protect your rights

Development

We provide training and opportunities for your growth

2

Health and Safety Protocols in the Food Industry

Your safety is our priority. Always follow these protocols.

Wear the proper PPE

Always wear hairnet, mask, apron, gloves, and safety shoes.

Personal Hygiene

Wash hands properly before handling food. Keep nails short and clean.

Clean as you go

Maintain cleanliness of your workstation and equipment.

Report hazards

Report spills, faulty equipment or unsafe conditions to your supervisor or HR immediately.

No eating or drinking inside inside production areas.

3

Knowing your Government Benefits

You have rights as an employee. These are provided by DOLE

Minimum Wage

You are entitled to at least the minimum wage in your region.

Night Shift Differential

At least 10% additional pay on night shift.

SSS, PhilHealth, Pag-IBIG

Mandatory contributions for your future and healthcare.

13th Month Pay

One month pay at the end of the year.

Service Incentive Leave (SIL)

5 days leave with pay after every year of service.

Regular Holidays & Premium Pay

Pay is higher on special days and holidays.

Right to a Safe Workplace

Your safety and health must be protected at all times.